PURGATORY EXISTS...and the month of November is devoted to praying for the Souls therein. That may seem like stating the obvious, but for some Catholics, purgatory has become what pastor, and blogger Father Dwight Longenecker called “the forgotten doctrine.” “Many modern Catholics don’t know what purgatory is anymore,” said Father Longenecker, “They’ve bought into the idea that sin has no consequences, that everyone goes to heaven because God is too nice to send anyone anywhere else.” The Church’s doctrine on purgatory, however, proclaims the opposite. It reminds us that sin does have consequences — eternal ones — and that while God is Love, he still honors the free choices made by men and women. “That’s the terrifying compliment God pays the creature,” said Dr. Regis Martin, professor of theology at Franciscan University “He takes seriously the freedom we exercise, even if it carries us straight into hell.” Hence the need for purgatory — the final purification of those who die in friendship with God but who haven’t fully broken their attachment to sin or atoned for wrongs done in this life. “God forgives us immediately when we ask. The role of suffering is to undo the damage we’ve done. It’s God the Healer applying the remedy to make us perfect images of Christ.” And perfect images of Christ is exactly what God calls each of us to become. (osvnews.com)
